

Law in History, Volumes I and II

Volume I: Between History and Law: On the Writing of Histories of Law and Society
Volume II: Law and Society

Edited by David Sugarman, Professor of Law and Director of the Law in History Programme, University of Lancaster, UK

The International Library of Essays in Law and Legal Theory: 1712

December 1996

244 x 169 mm

13362 pages

Hardback

978-1-85521-403-3

£375.00

This unique two volume work illuminates the history of law and society and some of the major contemporary approaches to the writing of those histories. The contributions reflect the important topics and questions, and the choices in subject-matter and methodology, that increasingly characterise "the new legal history". The editor's Introduction indicates the larger context of the selected articles, and makes extensive reference to important works not included in the anthology.

Volume One addresses:

- law and society in pre-industrial England
- theory and politics in American legal history
- the new history of criminal justice
- new directions in the writing of "law and society" histories

Volume Two considers:

- law, history and the construction of national identity
- lawyers, courts and the cultural significance of legal institutions
- law and popular culture
- gender and the law
- law and society

The chronological and geographical sweep of this collection is exceptionally wide. It considers criminal and civil law, legislation, custom, Roman law, church law, the legal profession, the culture and rituals of the courtroom, and the nature of legal thought. Also included are assessments of leading figures such as Maitland, Macfarlane, Hurst, Thompson, Friedman, Langbein, Horwitz and Hay.

Contents

ASHGATE DARTMOUTH

To order this book please visit www.ashgate.com, or email orders@ashgate.com
A 10% discount applies to orders placed through www.ashgate.com

Volume I: Histories of Law and Society: Law and Society in Pre-Industrial England: Fredric William Maitland, Paul Vinogradoff; Law and individualism in Medieval England, L.R. Poos and Lloyd Bonfield; Memoranda and document: a neglected aspect of the relations between economic and legal history, W.S. Holdsworth; An old play in modern dress, S.F.C. Milsom; 2 decades of English legal history, John H. Baker; Tribute: E.P. Thompson's legacies, Robert W. Gordon. Theory and Politics in American Legal History: Introduction: J. Willard Hurst and the common law tradition in American legal historiography, Robert W. Gordon; Beyond mirrors: Lawrence Friedman's moving pictures, Aviam Soifer; Review essay: M.J. Horwitz, the transformation of American law, 1780-1860, David Sugarman; Review essay: an exchange on critical legal studies between Robert W. Gordon and William Nelson: letter to William Nelson from Robert W. Gordon and Gordon's response to Nelson, Robert W. Gordon; William Nelson replies to Robert Gordon and Nelson's 2nd reply to Gordon, William Nelson; Review essay: the critical tradition in the writing of American legal history, Daniel R. Ernst. The New History of Criminal Justice: The criminal prosecution in England and its historians, Douglas Hay; Albion's fatal flaws, John H. Langbein; (Marxist) social history and (conservative) legal history: a reply to Professor Langbein, Peter Linebaugh; The crime wave: recent writings on criminal justice in 18th-century England, Joanna Innes and John Styles. Writing 'Law and Society' Histories: New Directions: Hermes, Clio, Themis: historical interpretation and legal hermeneutics, Donald R. Kelly; European legal history - a new field of research in Germany, Reiner Schulze; Superior knowledge or revelation: an approach to modern legal history, Steve Hedley; Opening the time capsule: a progress report on studies of courts over time, Lawrence M. Friedman; Text, translation, context, conversation: preliminary notes for decoding the deliberations of the advisory committee that wrote the federal rules of civil procedure, Peter Charles Hoffer; Moving beyond the canon of traditional constitutional history: anti-federalists, the Bill of Rights, and the promise of post-modern historiography, Saul Cornell; Approaching the history of rape and sexual violence: notes towards research, Shani D'Cruze; How who rides whom: recent 'new' histories of American labour law and what they may signify, Christopher Tomlins; Review article: writing 'law and society' histories, David Sugarman; Name index.

Volume II Histories of Law and Society: Law, History and the Construction of National Identity: Political thought in early Stuart England, Paul Christianson; Continental law and common law: historical strangers or companions?, R.M. Helmholz; The oldest science? The epistemic properties of the common law tradition, W.T. Murphy; Poor illiterate reason: history, nationalism and common law, Peter Goodrich; The genius of our law...criminal law and the Scottish legal tradition, Lindsay Farmer. Lawyers Courts and the Cultural Significance of Legal Institutions: Lawyers and early modern culture, William J. Bouwsma; Simple images and complex realities: English lawyers and their relationship to business and politics, David Sugarman; Authority, law and custom: the rituals of court day in Tidewater Virginia, 1720-1750, A.G. Roeber; Lawyers and politics in France 1814-1950: the state, the market and the public, Lucien Karpik; The concept 'act': legal origins and cultural diffusion, Barbara Shapiro; The emergence of the police - the colonial dimension, Mike Brogden. Law and Popular Culture: The moral economy of the English crowd in the 18th century, E.P. Thompson; Journeymen, the courts and the French trades 1781-1791, Michael Sonenscher. Gender and the Law: Wife beating, domesticity and women's independence in 18th-century England, Margaret Hunt; Common law versus common practice: the use of marriage settlements in early modern England, Amy Louise Erikson; Contesting the self: negotiating subjectivities in 19th-century Ontario defamation trials, Rosemary J. Coombe; A study of male sexuality in law: non-consummation, L.J. Moran. Law and Society: Sovereignty, absolutism and the function of the law in 17th-century France, David Parker; Hadley v Baxendale: a study in the industrialization of the law, Richard Danzig; The conventionalization of early factory crime, W.G. Carson; The peculiarities of the German state: bourgeois law and society in the imperial era, Michael John; Pigs and positivism, Hendrick Hartog; Name index.

www.ashgate.com/isbn/9781855214033

ASHGATE DARTMOUTH

To order this book please visit www.ashgate.com, or email orders@ashgate.com
A 10% discount applies to orders placed through www.ashgate.com